The City of Portland has decided to appeal Judge Michael Simon's court order to appear annually for a hearing assessing its implementation of the US Department of Justice (DOJ) Settlement Agreement. While the City claims the appeal is to "clarify" what kind of evidence can be brought forward by the parties, which also include the Portland Police Association and the Albina Ministerial Alliance (AMA) Coalition for Justice and Police Reform, the paperwork they filed clearly shows they intend to challenge the Judge's authority to ask questions about implementation of the Agreement.

Contact City Council.

- Tell them to rescind the appeal of the judge's order.
- Say that if they are committed to police reform and accountability, an annual hearing consisting of questions and answers is the least of their worries.
